IRAN TAKES "BUGGING" EFFORTS TO A NEW LEVEL

In a desperate effort to redeem their failed "bugging" efforts, Iran has unleashed a legion of beg bugs throughout conference. Outraged by the Iranian delegates' sloppy execution of bugging, the Iraninan Head of State ordered the Iranian delegation to let the bugs roam freely during the plenary. The Truthiness Express has already received reports that delegates are suffering extreme irritation and itching. Some delegates consider Iran's new bugging efforts to be an act of biological warfare.

Since the conference host, Reed College, is already swamped with a Hand, Mouth, and Foot Outbreak, Reed's health services will not be able to give medical attention and assistance to delegates. According to Reed's Conference and Event's planning director, delegates are expected to "suck it up in the name of World Peace." Iran wishes everyone Happy Scratching!

Hacking Scandal

In a shocking turn of events, it has come to light that the Chinese intelligence agency has been covertly hacking into the e-mails and personal information of the North Korean delegation. Beyond discovering several revealing photos of one particular foreign minister, documents pertaining to the Korean nuclear program were taken, angering many within that particular state. The Supreme Leader, Kim Jong Un, proclaimed that this represents a grand violation of trust by the Chinese government, and will force a reconsideration of the relationship between the two countries, "we might even consider talking to the Japanese now!"

Breaking News: Iranian Science Minister Assassinated!!!!

During a walk through Vollum Hall an assailant abducted the Science Minister of Iran with Nerf Gun and released this photo before the death shot. Our Truthiness Express analysts have traced the weapon to the Israeli Institute of Intelligence and Special Operations known as Mossad. Israel has not released a statement concerning the assassination. The United States ruled out any connection with the assassination. "We were not involved in any way with regards to the assassination that took place there," said Secretary of Defense Leon Panetta, although he did hint that he had "some idea" of who was. The British Foreign Office also said Britain had "no involvement whatsoever" in the attack.

Walk It Out

As the Israeli Delegation began the conference, the Iranian Delegation immediately stood up, shouted a bunch, and left. This lack of decorum could make conversations that ostensibly strive for peace much more difficult than they already were. The Israeli Delegation did nothing to help when they walked out of Iranian Delegation's speech towards the end.

Discussion at first session of the Reed College Nuclear Conference swiftly took a brutal turn when state after state revealed harsh allegation that the Iranian state made a puzzlingly inept attempt at espionage, in the form of two confirmed accounts of the use of listening devices in the rooms being used by several nations, including the United State, France, Pakistan, and Russia. These nations spoke out against this attempt, with the United States delegation claiming, "Those Iranian bastards came in and violated our rights!" France attempted a more diplomatic track, asking nicely if the Iranian government would act more "strategically" and have commented, "we would really like Iran to not do that again." For its part, Iran has responded by saying, "These outrageous claims against the great state of Iran and by extension the character of the Iran people are simply the language of the great Satan, and part of a global conspiracy to try to besmirch the Iranian delegation before our great quest for peace has even begun. " The leader of the conference, Grand Chairman Alexander Montgomery, has promised an official IAEA investigation of the discovered devices, but no word yet on the results.

Dear Vera,

I have a "friend" who accidentally represented himself as his arch nemesis at the plenary this afternoon. It was a simple mistake, it was just a flag after all, but now I fear it will be even harder to get the respect of the other delegations? Do you have any advice? How can we prove to the other nations present that we are the one true Korea?

Your Comrade,
Jealous Juche
