

Attach at the end of your homework assignment

Before writing up your assignment, read the handout “Communicating Mathematics through Homework and Exams”. Then, later, at the end of your write-up, include the following, labeling this as “Writing exercise”.

- (a) Mark up this written homework assignment (using a pen in a different color), indicating where you followed or failed to follow the mechanical and stylistic issues outlined in Communicating Mathematics... This means treat your write-up as a rough draft, and go point-by-point through this handout and address instances where on your assignment you followed or did not follow each direction. How might you improve in the future?
- (b) List three or more ways that you succeeded or failed at following the advice in Some Guidelines... (the article by F. Su that you summarized). How might you improve in the future?

To receive any credit for this extra credit assignment, you must complete this exercise.
